Classroom Conduct Rules:

- 1) Student will use the sign language sign for bathroom if they need to go to the bathroom while I am teaching. If they agree with something another person said they will use the sign language sign for me too or also, instead of blurting it out.
- 2) They will be allowed to go to the bathroom at anytime during the day, but can only get a drink when I am not in the process of teaching a lesson.
- 3) Snack can be had at anytime throughout the day, but not during the time of direct teaching. If it is a messy snack such as pudding they must eat it at their desks and cannot have electronics during that time.
- 4) All eyes and ears must be on the person who has the floor whether that be the teacher or a student who has been called on.
- 5) Follow directions the first time they are given. This will not happen right away in the year, but will be something I hope the class can accomplish by the end.
- 6) Follow the golden rule, to treat others how you want to be treated.

Rules related to academic work:

- 1) Homework will be turned into a basket. Before turning it in they will go to the highlighter station to highlight their name. If they go to highlight and realize their name is not there, then they know to go back and write it. This will help to not have to deal with work that has a no name.
- 2) If a student is caught cheating then they will have to write more or less depending on the grade, two-page paragraph on why it is wrong.

- 3) For a late work policy, the children will get one day to make up the work and anytime after that they will lose one point for each day.
- 4) They can have reading charts and the students will have to read 60 minutes per week. They will write it down in a book, along with the minutes read, and a parent signature in their chart to keep them on task and make sure they are completing the time each week.
